The Book Planning Guide for 2026

A book is easier to write when you plan it first. This guide shows what to decide before you write a book with AI: who it is for, what it promises, the chapters, the design, and a checklist before you share it.

Decide who the book is for

- The reader: write down who will read it, such as new gardeners, busy parents or small business owners.
- Their level: say if they are beginners or already know the basics.
- Why they read it: to learn a skill, to solve a problem, or to enjoy a story.

Write the promise in one sentence

- Say what the reader gets: "After this book, you can grow your own tomatoes on a balcony."
- Keep it small: one clear topic makes a better short book than a big topic.
- Choose a working title: short and plain. You can change it later in the plan.

Plan the chapters

- 3 to 8 chapters: each chapter covers one part of the topic.
- In a sensible order: start with the basics and end with the next steps.
- One line each: write what each chapter teaches or what happens in it.

Pick a design for your kind of book

Kind of book	Design that fits
How-to guide	Classic, Course or Visual Guide
Cookbook, travel or lifestyle	Magazine or Classic
Self-help, money or planning	Workbook
Business guide or plan	Report or Playbook
Story, novel or memoir	Novel
Picture book	Children's Book

Have the book details ready

- Title and subtitle: what goes on the cover.
- Author: your name or pen name.
- Publisher: your business name, or leave it out.

Before you share your book

☐ I read every chapter and fixed anything that is not right.

☐ I added my own stories, examples and knowledge.

☐ Every fact, price and date is checked and true.

☐ I read the rules of the store where I will publish, including its rules on AI help.
