The Song Prompt Planner for 2026

A song prompt tells an AI music tool what your song is about and how it should feel. This guide covers the five questions behind every good song prompt, the four narrative voices, lyric styles, how to size a prompt for Suno, Udio or any other tool, eight ready prompts, and a page to plan your own song.

Five questions for every song prompt

1. What is it about? One clear theme, like "leaving my hometown" or "a friendship that faded".
2. What happens? The story or the moment inside the theme: packing the car at dawn, a last phone call.
3. Who is singing, and to whom? First person, second person, third person, or no lyrics at all.
4. How do the words sound? Poetic, conversational, rhyming, storytelling, abstract or chorus-heavy.
5. How does it sound? The genre, the mood and one or two instruments.

Answer all five in plain sentences. Describe the sound, never a real artist, band or song.

The four narrative voices

Voice	Words it uses	Good for
First person	I, me, my	Personal stories and confessions
Second person	You, your	Love songs, letters and apologies
Third person	He, she, they	Story songs and character songs
No lyrics	None	Soundtracks and background music

Sizing a prompt for your tool

Suno: keep it short and feeling-led, about 30 to 45 words, with the genre and mood first. Udio: give more detail on the singer's voice, the lyric style and the arrangement, about 45 to 70 words. Any other tool: clear plain sentences of about 35 to 55 words.

Eight ready song prompts

1. Uplifting pop song about overcoming challenges, told in the first person. Bright synths, driving drums, a verse-chorus shape.
2. Smooth R&B love ballad sung to "you" about finding true love. Soulful vocals and jazz piano.
3. Melancholic indie folk story about childhood memories, told in the third person. Acoustic guitar and soft strings.
4. High-energy EDM track with no vocals, built as a loop. Pulsing bass, euphoric drops, a festival feeling.
5. Hopeful country song about leaving a small town at dawn, told in the first person with conversational lyrics.
6. Dark rock song about a promise that was broken, sung to "you", with a heavy chorus that repeats.
7. Peaceful acoustic song about a quiet Sunday morning, one scene from start to finish, poetic lyrics.
8. Energetic hip-hop track about a first big win, told in the first person with tight rhyming verses.
